MEMORANDUM FOR: Nancy J. Risque

Assistant to the President and

Cabinet Secretary

SUBJECT:

Presidential Medal of Freedom

Your memorandum came to me inasmuch as Bill Webster is out of the country for the next week or so. I regard that as a fortunate coincidence because it gives me the opportunity to suggest Bill Webster himself for the Medal of Freedom. I cannot think of anyone more deserving of this honor than Bill. As jurist, Director of the FBI for nine years and now Director of Central Intelligence, Bill Webster has put aside his private life and the opportunity for personal gain to serve this country. I think he very much was looking forward to returning to private life and a law practice a year ago when the President asked him to step into the breach and succeed Bill Casey as Director of Central Intelligence. Only a man with Bill Webster's patriotism and dedication to public service would have remained in government having already given such noteworthy service.

No one can quarrel with Bill's "especially meritorous contribution" to "the security or national interest of the United States". It may be said of Bill Webster that he took the reins of the FBI and of CIA at a time when each was confronted with enormous criticism and challenges to its professionalism and integrity. By dint of his own reputation and efforts, Judge Webster restored effectiveness and public esteem to these organizations so vital to America's national security and well-being. Taking over each agency during dark days of controversy and difficulty, he successfully led them through trying times — thus more than justifying the confidence reposed in him by successive Presidents of the United States.

I can think of no one whose sacrifice and achievements more warrant recognition with the Presidential Medal of Freedom than William H. Webster.
